Panamanian Vice-president highlights pro-fiscal transparency measures in Davos

During the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland, Panamanian Vice-president, Isabel de Saint Malo, assured that the country has taken “all of the necessary measures” to comply with the highest international standards for the prevention of tax evasion and avoidance.

During a debate about “Taxation Without Borders”, de Saint Malo assured that Panama started taking measures “way before” the wrongfully-called Panama Papers scandal.

“Since we arrived at the government two and a half years ago, we have established a very clear road-map and we have taken all the necessary measures that had to be taken, even before the Panama Papers, because we assumed that we were behind in many areas”, explained de Saint Malo.

The leak pointed to a “global problem”, she argued, whose solution required Panama’s participation, but also the rest of the world’s, and stressed that “today there are no pending issues in Panama’s steps towards meeting the highest international standards”.

France recognizes Panama’s willingness to cooperate on tax matters

French ministers Michel Sapin and Christian Eckert (Source: AFP).

France appreciated Panama’s “willingness” to advance fiscal cooperation and transparency after a bilateral meeting at the Ministry of Economy and Finance’s operational headquarters to try to revoke the country’s inclusion in the list of tax havens.

“Ministers Michel Sapin and Christian Eckert took note of Panama’s willingness to advance in fiscal cooperation and transparency,” the press office of the French tax administration said.

“During the meeting, it was noted the recent changes made by Panama in its legislation regarding access to company accounting and the identification of the effective beneficiaries of the different structures, effective as of January 1, 2017.” Panama ambassador to France Pilar Arosemena de Alemán described the meeting as “constructive”.

French officials said the bilateral meeting was held in “a constructive environment” with the “objective of identifying if Panama could meet the conditions to leave the French list of non-cooperative jurisdictions.”

Ambassador Arosemena revealed that a team of tax specialists from the French Economy Ministry will travel to Panama in February 2017 to set up a bilateral agreement with the Panamanian authorities to consolidate the automatic exchange of tax information.

Panama launches high-level commission

With the purpose of strengthening their international and financial services, the Government of the Republic of Panama re-launched on Thursday February 2nd, the “High-level Commission for International Services and Financial Resources" (CANSIF, for its Spanish acronym), with the purpose of re-focusing this advisory body to develop new competitive advantages for the country and to strengthen the Panamanian services platform.

CANSIF, which is a team advisory committee composed of representatives of the public and private sectors, was created a few years ago with the main responsibility for establishing and promoting the country strategy in the face of international pressure for greater transparency and exchange of information.

The concrete achievements made, allow Panama to move from a defensive strategy to focus primarily on the development of new services and competitive advantages that maintain the validity of the Panamanian Services Platform in compliance with the expectations of the international community.

Panama advances in the fight against money laundering

The government presented the "Risk Assessment of Panama for the Prevention of Money Laundering and the Financing of Terrorism", during a forum held by the Ministry of Economy and Finance (MEF).

"The National Assessment of Risk of Panama identifies economic activities and classified as low, medium or high risk stop the money laundering. This document allows us to take measures to eliminate or mitigate these risks, and it is essential to develop our strategy to prevent the laundering of money," informed Minister of Economy and Finance Dulcidio De La Guardia.

"The establishment of this new legal framework for our country has been a titanic work, achieved in record time thanks to the joint efforts of the public and private sector. In February 2016, Panama came out of the gray list of the FATF, today we are taking a step in the right direction and we are going to continue day after day", stressed the Minister.
